New York to California.
Colorado a Winter Resort.
Earth's Champion Turkey.
What a Country This Is.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

(Copyright, 1929, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

THIS is written on "The Chief," Santa Fe fast train, leaving Chicago at 11:15 a. m., cutting one night from the coast-to-coast trip.

Bitterly cold weather through Illinois and into Kansas City, which will soon be as big as Chicago is now.

THEN through Kansas, wonderful, placid state, where prohibition was taken seriously long before prohibition entered the constitution.

Magnificent wide fields, thousands of cattle and pigs nibbling grass above the thin snow, enormous piles of straw worth little where they stand, worth $25 a ton in New York.

FROM KANSAS "The Chief" climbs uphill into Colorado, the high state.

At La Junta, 4,500 feet above sea level, passengers and children leave the train for the first time, amazed at warm sunshine at such an altitude.

F. G. Bonfils, whose Denver Post blankets this part of the world, should advertise Colorado as a winter resort. It will be a winter resort, and crowded, when flying is fully developed.

Colorado has the Rocky Mountains, the fine Capitol with gold-colored dome in Denver, just one mile above the ocean, magnificent slopes covered with beautiful blue spruce, where you may "all see footprints of dinosaurs in the sandstone.

AND Colorado owns "Lady Bird," hen turkey that won the grand championship sweepstakes at the international show in Chicago.

To possess the Rocky Mountains AND the champion hen turkey in the world, to say nothing of rainbow trout that weigh ten pounds, is worth while.

YOU pass from Colorado into beautiful New Mexico. In all the world there is no sky more beautiful, no weather more perfect, no air more glorious. Then you realize the futility of trying to select "the best state in the Union."

JUST ahead is Arizona. Col. Hoyce Thompson says that is the finest land on earth.

It possesses the Grand Canyon, first wonder of the world.

Then Nevada, a little to the north, land of precious metals.

And then California, stretching a thousand miles along the Pacific with giant redwood and sprightly Hollywood.

And to the north, great Oregon and Washington, with pines 14 feet in diameter, 700 years old, and half of the nation's water power.

BACK, far to the south, its northern boundary south of California's southern line, in Florida, sun parlor of the east, with fertility to feed the whole nation. To the northeast, New York, with the tickers and all the money.

Giant Texas, biggest of all, and empire among 48 states and the other Gulf states. Lake states and New England, not even mentioned.

It's a wonderful country. Every American should see it all, and let his children see it. Our railroads offer the maximum of luxurious comfort.

Or an automobile will take you and your family anywhere for as little as you choose to spend.

It is such a fine country that we really ought to retain exclusive control of it, and not let any League of Nations Court tell us what to do about its resources and responsibilities.

George Washington managed that with fewer than 4,000,000 people. Why cannot we do it, with 120,000,000?

King George Opens Five-Power Parley

WORLD LEADERS HEAR BRITISH RULER SPEAK

Delegates Assemble in London House of Lords.

HISTORIC MEET

MacDonald, Stimson And Others Urge Good Will.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—In the glittering golden-hued royal gallery of the House of Lords, which through the years has seen history-making of a far different sort, five powers inaugurated this morning the most ambitious attempt to limit navies that the world has seen since the historic Washington conference.

Today's opening was in startlingly direct contrast to Washington, where the then Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes electrified the world with his sharp admonition to the powers to reduce their navies or be outbuilt by the United States.

There was no such peremptory beginning today — instead, King George of England opened the session with a hospitable and inebriated greeting which was followed by the heads of each government professing their loyalty to the cause of disarmament, but significantly calling attention to the manifold difficulties.

Statesmen Pledge Co-operation. One after another Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, Premier Andre Tardieu, Dino Grandi and Reijiro Wakatsuki arose and solemnly pledged their utmost efforts for success and pleaded for good will and confidence as indispensable.

All reminded their colleagues of the shoals ahead.

It was a beautiful and inspiring spectacle. Behind the horseshoe table where the delegates sat, was an enormous fresco depicting the death of Admiral Nelson at Trafalgar, and facing this a companion fresco showing Wellington meeting Blucher after Waterloo—a warlike setting for such a tremendous undertaking in behalf of peace.

GALLERY IS FILLED. Nearly 800 persons filled the gallery. Of these 30 were the principal delegates and scores of technical advisers, 300 newspaper correspondents, peers, British officials and others, but out beyond these the whole world listened in through the greatest world-wide radio hook-up ever attempted. Far away New Zealand heard as well as the nearby Continent.

As host to the conference, Premier MacDonald outlined the aims of the parley immediately following King George's speech of welcome, stressing the most vital necessity of success. Unless naval competition stopped, he warned that the whole world was traveling the same road which led to 1914.

With this he made a special plea for special consideration of Britain's position as an island empire, more dependent upon sea power than any others.

Stimson Outlines Hopes. Secretary Stimson then took the floor and in a clear, strong voice outlined to the assembled delegates the high hope which the United States held that the conference would result in a complete success.

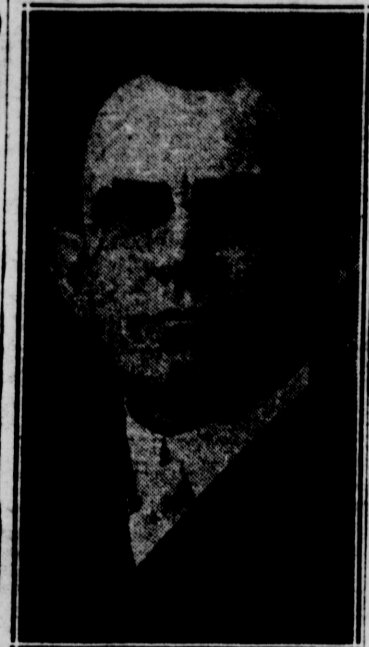

He stressed the fact, however, this could be considered at best only a temporary achievement, which must perforce be reviewed from time to time in the future in order that the changing political complexion of the world could be put to use to strengthen and amplify whatever peace-making agreement.

SOLEMN SCENE AS MONARCH MOUNTS DAIS

Little or no Ceremony As Sailor King Arrives.

SPEECH "ON AIR"

His Majesty in Morning Dress at Conference.

By HARRY R. FLORY
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Without pomp and with little or no ceremony, George V., Great Britain's sailor king, today officially opened the London naval conference.

It was a solemn scene, for all his immediate listeners realized the historic significance of the moment as His Majesty stepped up before the gold and silver microphones reserved especially for his use and began his speech, which was broadcast to the ends of the earth and was heard by millions.

The setting was the royal gallery of the House of Lords, the imposing chamber used normally as an assembly room by brilliantly-robed and gowned peers and peeresses preceding the state opening of the British Parliament.

Little Color in Gallery.

Today's scene had none of the color usually associated with the royal gallery. The king himself was in morning dress, and the majority of the audience were frock coated or in ordinary dark business suits.

The delegates of the five participating powers—the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy—were seated around a horseshoe table, separated at the apex for the accommodation of the throne chair on a dais.

They included the prime ministers of Great Britain and France, the foreign ministers of Great Britain, France and Italy, the secretary of state of the United States, naval ministers of all five powers and a half a dozen ambassadors.

Welcomes Delegates.

The king entered the house of lords by Norman porch and proceeded by the grand staircase to the robing room. When he stepped across the threshold from the robing room into the royal gallery all those attending the opening session rose in their place. He

"I want it, too," Mrs. Ward replied, and then opened fire, wounding one of them. As she attempted to fire again, the gun jammed.

The other man quickly assisted his wounded partner to a car which bore a Michigan license and sped away.

CITY TO SPEND $30,000 ON INCINERATOR

Councilmen Announce Plan to Rebuild Plant.

ABANDON TRIP

Pave Way for Free Collection of Garbage.

Preparatory to the free collection of garbage, which will be started this spring, the city incinerator at the foot of Washington street, will be rebuilt at a cost which may reach $30,000, councilmen said today.

The plant, erected in 1910, is practically worn out and experts have advised members of council and the service department that it would be inadvisable to repair it. The present building and stack will be used, new equipment will be installed.

The old incinerator, members of council have been told would be unable to take care of the garbage which is received at the plant when the free collection starts, especially during the peak of the summer months.

Members of council were to inspect an incinerator near Cincinnati today, but the proposed trip was called off yesterday when it was learned that only a few of the lawmakers would be able to go. At least two concerns engaged in the incinerator-making business have made surveys of the local plant and given estimates as to the cost of rebuilding it.

Consideration of legislation is being delayed until council reaches a decision regarding the type of an incinerator needed. Trips to Youngstown and Cleveland for an inspection of disposal plants have been suggested.

Plans for the garbage collection have not been made by the health board. Whether the garbage collection will be handled by the city or by contract has not been determined. The two-can system of collection, however, has practically been agreed upon.

THE THEATER

"HALLELUJAH" FILM NEW PAGE IN STORY OF ART OF SCREEN

Vidor Hit at Ceramic "Big Parade" of Negro Race.

In every sense of the expression, "Hallelujah," which does for the American Negro what "The Big Parade" did for the soldier, since it shows the human side of a great race, writes a new page in the history of the art of the screen.

Classed among "The Big Ten" by motion picture critics, the haunting music, the spirituals and the blues of the southern Negro as presented in this King Vidor production won the plaudits of large crowds at the Ceramic theater last night, where the "Perry" of the screen opened a three-day engagement.

Daring and original, this first all-Negro drama, laid where "Old Man River" flows, is probably the strangest and one of the most fascinating talking pictures yet presented in East Liverpool.

This drama of the soul of the south traces the life of a young Negro, reared on a plantation, through the gamut of human experiences and emotions. And it contains many spectacular scenes, such as the baptism on the banks of the Mississippi, with thousands of white-robed worshippers; the great camp meeting where the preacher roars his congregation to religious frenzy and other powerful episodes.

And what a cast! Daniel Haynes, of New York's "Show Boat" production; Nina Mae McKinney, of "Blackbirds"; Fannie Belle de Knight, of "Lulu Belle"; Harry Gray, Victoria Spivey, William Fontaine and others of the professional stage, are among those in the picture. And the extras were recruited from the streets of Memphis, the night clubs of Chicago and the plantations along the Mississippi.

"Hallelujah" is a great picture. And just for good measure, the Ceramic bill includes Fox talking pictures, featuring Spain's welcome to the new ambassador from the United States; American's safest plane which won a $100,000 award; Nippon girls in "Western Style" drill; current events in the Paramount News; and Ruth Etting in a vitaphone act.—F. R. O'H.

ETERNAL TRIANGLE IN "DEVIL ISLAND" TALE AT AMERICAN

Ronald Colman, Ann Harding in Cast of "Condemned."

The eternal triangle can develop and thrive anywhere, even in the fetid atmosphere of a "Devil's Island," as the famous, or infamous, French penal colony in South America is so aptly termed: equally effective there as it may be in the most ornate, highly cultured drawing room.

Thus, Ronald Colman, Ann Harding and Dudley Digges are cast in "Condemned," an all-week feature at the American theater—Colman as the convict, Digges, the warden, and Ann Harding, his wife. A highly interesting story is, possibly, portrayed even more vividly on the screen, based, to a certain extent on actual facts, with, of course, essential embellishments.

Colman as Michel, Parisian thief, gets six months at "Devil's Island," from which actually only two men have ever escaped, hemmed in, as it is, by shark-infested waters and fever-haunted swamps.

With him goes Jacques, better known as Louis Wolheim. Vidal, the warden, has an extremely comely young wife, who, longing for her native France, is herself also more or less of a prisoner on the island. The pompous Vidal ultimately selects Michel as his house-boy. The handsome Michel and the beautiful Madame Vidal thrown together most of the day in their household duties, marketing and other affairs! Vidal, himself an uncouth, sloppy looking individual, should have known better. But the gossip island women grasp the situation immediately—and make the most of it. And Vidal in a fit of unjustly jealous rage, throws Michel back into prison. He even makes insinuations in Michel's presence and Michel punches him in the jaw. For that he gets "solitary." Ann refuses to pretend further. She declares her love for Michel and is promptly hurled aboard a ship for France. In the meantime, she gets word of her going to Michel who engineers an escape in an attempt to join her.

Wolheim, or Jacques, at the last moment decides to go with him. The resultant man-hunt, as it is pictured on the screen, lacks little in realism, with the crackling bamboo, the snapping of twigs, the swish of boughs and the sloshing of feet through the swamps with Poor old Wolheim, who has met more sudden screen deaths than possibly any other character in Hollywood, who has been hanged eight times and shot 24 times, was drowned for the thirteenth time in this picture, but his drowning paves the way for a happy ending.

The dialogue is excellent, for the reason, no doubt, that Dudley Digges, Theater Guild star, Miss Harding, also of the legitimate stage, and Colman do most of it.—F. J. W.

LOST 14 Pounds of Fat

Finder Is Welcome To Have It —I'm Mighty Glad To Get Rid of It.

Some folks are naturally fat but there's a lot of people who put on pounds of unhealthy fat because they haven't got enough energy to move about to keep it off.

It's not laziness in most cases—but a condition brought about by sluggishness of the internal organs—the liver, bowels and kidneys. As a result poisons and harmful acids that kill vigor, ambition and energy get into their blood—the whole general tone of the body is lowered and fat accumulates.

Thousands of over stout men and women find in Kruschen Salts a far better means of reducing than by taking baths or drugs.

The little daily dose of Kruschen Salts keeps the organs functioning properly every day and fills you with such a feeling of radiant vitality that before you know it you are fairly "jumping out of your skin" with energy instead of moping around—and reduction follows as a matter of course. Get a bottle of Kruschen Salts from Carnahan Drug Co. or any good druggist—if it doesn't change your entire idea about reducing, get your money back.

A jar of Kruschen Salts that will last 4 weeks costs but 85c—take a generous half teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning.

One of my readers (sure, I've got one) writes to inquire how it feels to write a daily column. Being a lady, I can't answer truthfully. Anyway, my boss wouldn't permit his presses to burn up in such an unworthy cause. But writing a daily column is like writing a letter dkt only more of it.

In pursuit of a laugh, a drone (male bee, if you'll forgive my hoosier) was recruited to play a scene with Charlie Mack in "The Two Black Crows in the A. E. F." Male bees are less than henpecked husbands. They are born to be useless, to lay around the hive, and to eat prodigiously. They can't even selte a mate and set up light housekeeping. The queen bee does all the choosing and what she does to her husband-for-a-flight safeguards the voting franchise to the female bees.

Be that as it may, a drone bee was corraled for a scene with Charlie Mack. An invisible thread was wound around his anatomy. A propertyman held on to the other end of the string and thus succeeded in making buzzo a good camera hog. After dodging the bee for a few franks of the camera, Mack slaps his hat over him and draws into the "mike": "Dar you is. Now think it out in the dark."

The drone died shortly after its stupendous debut as a movie actor. In which, of course, there's a moral.

SOCIETY WOMAN SUES CHICAGO 'COUNTESS'

Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein, widow of theatrical producer, has put process servers on the trail of Mrs. Philippe du Brissac Hultar, formerly Bronislawa Lamprecht de Petschenko. Her lawyer states that the legal action was taken to recover monies that the "Countess" owes his client.

Marion Shilling is a lit' brunette who hails from St. Louis, Mo. Marion is 19 and never nursed any movie hopes whatsoever. Between school vacations she used to play in her father's stock kumpany in St. Louis. The family traped her some months ago. Still Marion didn't aspire to the flicks. It was John Lancaster, M. G. M. exeek and mutual friend, who persuaded her to come to the studio and take a test for the lead in "Kempy," with Elliott Nugent. Marion thought it a joke, but she consented, and to her surprise cora risk. It's an out-and-out good-bye.

Local dentists are doing a land-office business tightening bridge work. It hasn't been so cold in this map spot since the earliest settlers went Rotarian and the Chamber of Commerce learned its superlatives.

AND—THAT'S ALL.

Current Playbills

STATE.
A few years ago a dark young girl played the role of Wendy in the screen version of "Peter Pan." It was Mary Brian's debut in moving pictures. She has risen steadily in the ranks of leading film folks, and in the favor of movie fans. With the advance of the talking films she has increased the value of her stock mightily. In "The Man I Love," in "River of Romance," and in "The Virginian" she has shown real talent.

Now, in "The Marriage Play-ground," which is showing today for the last time in the State theater, she makes her strongest bid for well deserved applause. The plot is based on Edith Wharton's best seller, "The Children."

AVOID THAT FUTURE SHADOW*

By refraining from over-indulgence, if you would maintain the modern figure of fashion

Fashion revels in the soft, enchanting curves of the modern figure. Don't sacrifice that graceful contour by permitting your eyes to be bigger than your stomach. Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. Eat healthfully but not immoderately. When tempted to treat yourself too well, when your eyes are bigger than your stomach, light a Lucky instead. Coming events cast their shadows before. Avoid that future shadow by avoiding over-indulgence if you would maintain the modern, alluringly-rounded figure.

Lucky Strike, the finest Cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobacco—The Cream of the Crop—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so "TOASTING" not only removes impurities but adds to the flavor and improves the taste.

*Be Moderate!... Don't jeopardize the modern form by drastic diets, harmful reducing girdles, fake reducing tablets or other quack "anti-fat" remedies condemned by the Medical profession! Millions of dollars each year are wasted on these ridiculous and dangerous nostrums. Be Sensible! Be Moderate! We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will "Reach for a Lucky" instead, you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form.

Good Work, Firemen!

East Liverpool persons who were kept busy firing furnaces and thawing frozen water pipes over the week-end should have some idea of the conditions under which Fire Chief Thomas Bryan and his co-workers fought two stubborn blazes which exacted a loss of $21,000 on Sunday morning.

Thanks to the good judgment used by the fire fighters, a business district blaze was confined to the R. E. Spencer studio in East Fourth street, although the fire broke out among inflammable films and flashlight powder on the second floor of the structure. The loss from water seeping into the city water works office and a shoe repair shop on the first floor of the building was comparatively small. No damage was sustained by the Ohio Power company, occupying another part of the first floor, and the firemen's efforts prevented the flames from spreading to the adjoining First Presbyterian church.

Equally as good service was performed in battling a fire which swept a double frame house in Thompson avenue, owned by Samuel Millward and occupied by the Bert Capper and Albert Freymark families. This blaze, which had gained considerable headway before the fire fighters arrived, was especially hard to control.

And sub-zero weather, which quickly turned water from the fire hose lines into ice on the sidewalks, prevailed during both fires. Despite suffering from exposure, Chief Bryan, Assistant Chief McMillan and their captains as well as the men in the ranks gave a good account of themselves. They deserve a word of praise for their splendid work.

Limitations of Safety

Dispatches from Mitchell Field where the Guggenheim Fund's prize check of $100,000 for aircraft development was bestowed on the Curtiss Tanager plane state that spectators were confident that the money was awarded wisely. The Curtiss craft hopped into the air with surprising alacrity; it dropped gracefully to earth in a fashion really not unlike a sea gull taking the water and with hardly more effort. Less obvious from the ground was the air stability built into the plane, which gives it unusual powers of recovery from the errors of inexperienced or careless piloting. This remarkable plane, although differing slightly in appearance from others, is a fine example of what can be done if one starts to build all practicable safety factors into the conventional design. It will, no doubt, have considerable influence upon subsequent models in the various types of aircraft.

Yet, safe as this plane has proven itself to be in the hands of an experienced pilot, science cannot overcome the "nature of the beast." Aviation will never be foolproof. "Moving masses," as the vice-president of the Guggenheim Foundation said himself, "cannot be made foolproof. Old Man Kinetic Energy can always do damage to a fool." Aviators seldom tire of pointing out that this estimable old gentleman destroys annually about 25,000 lives through the medium of the lowly automobile, which has no goods to give it more speed and altitude. It is a good figure to use when discussing the safety of the airplane, yet it does not offer a fair comparison considering the millions whom Old Man Kinetic Energy daily transports in safety by the same vehicle. There are a few, super-impressed with the dangers of modern traffic, who would say that flying a plane is no more difficult than driving an automobile a mile on a city thoroughfare.

The public is hopeful that even more radical improvements may be developed in the future to further the safety of air travel. The average man feels that insofar as safety is concerned the weakest point in aviation is the heavy burden placed upon human skill in piloting. It may be that, given the nature of the air and the continued existence of gravity, this is a problem beyond final solution, but the hope is that one interesting effort toward safety will encourage aviation to concentrate its efforts upon some such goal.

The Music Room

Speech is alien in the privacy of the bathroom. It is heard only on those occasions when a stubbed toe or a dull razor demand a few muttered invectives. Whistling too is a rarity, for the simple reason that whistling demands a condition of the lips impossible to maintain when one's mouth is curtailed with lather or water from the tub. But if the morning is not too blue, the water not too cold, or business worries not too pressing, there is invariably a recourse to song. And what glorious music!

Bathtub singing, one of the most personal and widely practiced of the arts, has somehow escaped the attention it deserves by reason of its paramount importance in the life of the nation. In England, The Manchester Guardian has devoted some of its valuable space to a list of songs standing high in favor with bathroom singers. The prize list included "What Shall We Do With The Drunken Sailor?" "John Peel," "The Tarpaun Jacket" and "Here's a Health Unto His Majesty." Only one song familiar to Americans, "John Brown's Body," was noted and that in the second list.

Accepting in toto The Guardian's provisions that the two prime essentials in songs of the bath are noise and joy, investigation reveals that America's tile-and-soap songs are "My Wild Irish Rose," "Sweet Rosy O'Grady," "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," "How Dry I Am" and that popular current hit, "Singin' in the Rain." Other songs receiving votes, but not in sufficient abundance, are "Sometimes I'm Happy," "Me and My Shadow," "The Irish Washerwoman" and "Ave Maria." In all of these the theme is the important thing; for instance in "Singin' in the Rain" all that is necessary is the repetition of the title. Reasons and results are made up as the bather progresses in enthusiasm and cleanliness. The old faithful "rump-tum-dum" and "da-da-da-da" are abundant and of infinite value.

Why do all men sing in the bathroom? Why does anyone sing in the bathroom? Because, regardless what the acousticians may say and believe, the human voice takes on certain beautiful qualities as it is released in the shining whiteness of the tile and porcelain fitted sanctuary. The radio will never find a place there; it is the one place where amateur individuality in the matter of music holds unlimited sway.

Other Editorial Opinions

THE WORLD COURT AGAIN.

Signing of the necessary preliminary papers for the entry of the United States into the World court has been completed and the next official move is for the president to send them to the senate. What will be done with them there is uncertain.

It is said that most of the objections of the so-called irreconcilables in that body have been met. To make them so has been the laborious task of Elihu Root and Secretary of State Stimson. President Hoover seems to have approved the terms by his instructions to Charge d'Affaires Morgan at Geneva to sign them on behalf of the United States.

There still will be long argument over them when they come before the senate. That will not be until after Secretary Stimson's return from the arms conference in London. So, the country will be spared for quite a time the agony of the senatorial flare, and there will be ample time for a full study of all the documents and what they mean to the United States.

Apparently we are drifting closer to the League of Nations, of which the World court is more or less a creation, although there are several nations, not signatories of the league, who have entered the World court. The question to be decided by the United States is on what terms we should enter the court, if we enter it at all. Certain it is that we must be so surely protected by the terms as to keep out of entanglements into which foreign governments might be able to draw us by reason of their majority representation in that body.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SENATE AND FREE SPEECH

William Hard is quoted to the effect that "the senate was violating the constitution right of free speech." We hope that this useful member of the fourth estate has been misquoted. The constitution merely says that congress shall enact no law abridging the freedom of speech, which is quite another thing from guaranteeing to the citizenry the right to say what it likes, when it likes; and it would not help the cause of free speech in the slightest to have Mr. Hard dragged into Senator Caraway's chamber ardente and made the victim of another auto de fe because he accused the senate of violating a right that doesn't exist.

The distinction between what the constitution says congress shall not do and what Mr. Hard is alleged to have inferred that the constitution itself does is of more academic than practical significance. Something more than a constitutional prohibition would be required to restrain the zeal of a senate committee that has broken through the constitutional safeguards with which the private citizen heretofore has fondly thought he was surrounded, and without cause and on the flimsiest pretexts, summoned men before it and heaped obloquy on them for daring to criticize a body they are taxed to keep in office. The senate has gone so far toward making "contempt" a new and heinous crime that it now seems to feel it necessary to protect its position by intimidation. Allow it to get away with that and the only sanctuary of freedom where alone one will dare to open his mouth except in adulation of "the most august body in the world."—Detroit Free Press.

THE FLIRT.

New York Day By Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 21. — New York has a group of high-jumping young ladies always seen where lights are brightest. They are daughters of very rich parents and of whom a society writer recently wrote: "Declassé debutantes on a bust."

Many live in the Gothic grandeur of those barn-like mansions that have somehow stubbornly resisted the sweep of the deluxe apartment house. Surfeited with ennui, they go panhandling royalty through life—expecting every thing and giving nothing.

Eternal gadabouts—they are here today and sporting on the bathing beaches of Palm Beach and Cannes tomorrow. They gulp cocktails like the hardest toper, burn up cigarettes in quick inhalations and noshock Wateauish old ladies at dinner parties with boasts of virginity.

Despite their halo of wealth, they would be tossed out of the toughest speakeasy back rooms on Tenth Avenue. What they try to pass off as "the new frankness" is in reality the patter of the brothel. Their idea of cleverness is a secret flirtation with a married man.

Paree purse strings are never tightened. They have individual cars for every occasion and one actually has four chauffeurs on her personal payroll. But with all the luxury, they suggest the utility of those bags of the Monte Carlo gambling tables who carry on by frequent fiery jolts of brandy.

Once in while they seek to "express themselves" by opening a tea room, an antique salon, interior decorating shop or by writing a dirty book. But chiefly they play bridge for high stakes all afternoon, guzzle gin and dance with gigolos until dawn.

Frequently they slump from night club tables and are hurriedly carried sick drunk through kitchens to their limousines. Strangely enough most of them have been reared in an atmosphere of super-refinement. But the jazz mania gripped and holds them fast.

One of the giddy guild, however, met her match in a chop house the other night. Primed with whisky, she was aiming shafts of stinging sarcasm at innocent diners a few tables away. Finally one insulted and white-faced gentleman walked over to her and with a deadly calm said: "Listen! I used to stoke coal on a lake steamer with your Daddy before he found an oil well in his back yard. We sweat. But at that we were cleaner than you."

W. C. Gibson, dean of the art editors and known to every illustrator in the world as "Pop," has finally retired to enjoy a future of leisurely ease in far-away Switzerland. "Pop" made many efforts "to get away from it all" and do a little painting himself, but old ties, old associations held him. He has for years been father confessor to such artists as Harrison Fisher, Dean Cornwell, James Montgomery Flagg, W. T. Benda and scores of others among top-notchers. He is old in service, but not in years, and his reward is to be pensioned on full salary for the remainder of his days.

"Pop" Gibson has gone through life dealing with perhaps the most difficult people to handle. Artists are sensitive, quick-tempered and inclined to sulk over trifles. It was "Pop's" job to laugh them out of their moods, and he did.

Mr. Gibson's fine character reminds me there are many other rare souls in this old world. Recently a man who has worked hard for his success dropped into my workshop. He had just learned his daughter smuggled several crooks in from Europe and was voluntarily on his way to customs to apologize for her act and pay the duty and penalties.

I have lost much faith in billboard advertising. Near Long Island City a huge billboard—and what a treat!—proclaims: "Meet O. O. McIntyre—Every Day in the New York American." I have driven a visitor from home past it a dozen times, even stopping once in front of it as though suspecting a puncture, but it fails to catch his eye.

How To Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

IT is very sad to see a young person, who has been well and strong, normal and cheerful in his mental processes, suddenly develop some unusual and disturbing symptoms. The things which used to make him happy may seem now to bore and even irritate him. He may develop "brain storms" when he will break furniture, swear and act like a demon.

The mental diseases of youth are grouped under the general term "Dementia Praecox." This condition rarely attacks one past twenty-five years of age. It is associated with the development period of life.

There is a weakness of the mental processes and inverted ideas. At times there may be great mental excitement, and at others, periods of depression and sadness. Occasionally there is mental alertness, and then times when the mind is confused.

Sometimes he may recite one line of poetry for hours at a time. He will perform the same act over and over.

The marked difference between the feeble-minded youth who has always been weak-minded and the youth with dementia praecox is shown by the history of the case. In dementia praecox the onset may be sudden. Shock, fright or prostration, either bodily or mental in origin, may be followed by this disability. In other cases its onset is gradual and the course is progressive. The acute and sudden type is the more hopeful of cure.

It may take time, but recovery comes. The slow type is more serious.

If there is found to be a lowered resistance from some discoverable cause the prospect of recovery is good. For instance, if the young person has been ill or overworked removal of the existing cause will go far toward restoring his health.

Recent work of physicians in these cases has made us more hopeful of their outcome. They must be studied with particular reference to localized infection in teeth, tonsils, large intestines or other parts of the body. When the physical basis is found recovery follows the removal of the primary trouble.

Careful examination of the blood and all of the secretions are necessary. Until every test has been made no reliable estimate of the probabilities can be attempted.

The rest cure is a good thing. Rest in bed, proper nourishment, baths, massages, change of scene are all important. More important is the finding of the fundamental physical trouble and getting rid of it.

The Reviewing Stand

By TOM T. JONES

MANY memories regarding the events that have taken place in it have been recalled by readers of The Review who recently read a bit of history in these columns regarding those who taught it and attended as pupils of the Alderick school in a corner of Madison township. Among others it served to recall the single time in which Oliver Vodyrey, of Park boulevard, ever visited the place. This occurred at night. Despite his long residence in East Liverpool he has never witnessed it in daylight.

Some thirty years ago or thereabouts Mr. Vodyrey drove Edward Crosser, now of Lisbon but then of the firm of Crosser and Ogilvie of East Liverpool to the Alderick school. The occasion was a political meeting. The trip, in the fall of the year, was made with a single horse and buggy and by way of the Jethro hill. After an arduous dirt-road trip they reached the spot in time to hear the speeches.

Later Mr. Crosser entered politics and became county recorder among other honors that have come to him as a party leader. One of the speakers on this occasion was the late Philip M. Ashford, then of Salineville. He had read law with the late Attorney A. H. Clark of East Liverpool when the latter had offices in what is now the Croxall building at Broadway and East Fourth street.

THE legislature was reached by Mr. Ashford at a time in which he was able to become known to Mark Hanna, also a native of Columbiana county. This came about that Mr. Ashford became one of the assistant attorney generals in the McKinley administration. He served on until the Wilson tenure began. But he always came back to Salineville to vote. Indeed, Mrs. Ashford continues doing so since he passed away some time ago in Washington, D. C. She was here last fall for the purpose and became ill while a guest at the home of a sister in Salem. She, however, recovered.

During his incumbency as a member of the staff of the attorney general in Washington, Mr. Ashford, Mr. Vodyrey relates, had jurisdiction over dock and harbor legal matters reaching the department. He thus for an interim had the late Admiral Peary, the famed Arctic explorer under him when the latter, following his return from the far north, was assigned to duty under him. They became fast personal friends as a result.

DURING his stay in the proximity of the North Pole a daughter was born to Admiral and Mrs. Peary. His wife had accompanied him. Great distinction came to this child for years thereafter because of her birth so far away from civilization and in such a cold clime. Mr. and Mrs. Ashford had a daughter of about the same age. Naturally they also became close friends.

And both are now married and living under the same roof in Washington. Mr. Vodyrey further related. The daughter of the admiral married a son of a contractor in the Capital City. He built them a large commodious double house. Miss Ashford, marrying also, was given the other section of the domicile. And the friendship of youth continues in their maternal years. Thus in a sense is Columbiana county connected closely with the North Pole by having the daughter of one of its residents so closely allied with a relative of Admiral Peary.

DURING a part of the Harding and the Coolidge regimes John Marshall, of New Cumberland, W. Va., was assistant U. S. attorney general. As a crow flies the distance between Salineville, Ohio, and New Cumberland, W. Va., is not great. Indeed Columbiana county of the one state borders upon Hancock county of the other with the Ohio river intervening between them. These two pointsments to places next to a cabinet officer in the legal department of the country have, save for the eight years in which Woodrow Wilson was president, kept almost intermittently for a long period men from this immediate locality in a high place in the federal government.

During Mr. Ashford's long Washington experience there doubtless often came back to him his speaking experiences at the Alderick school house as well as the days on the hill just off the Ohio river in East Liverpool where he acquired the rudiments of the law.

Edward Laughlin, long a salesman hereabouts, was in his youthful days a newspaper man. He served an interim in the circulation department of The Crisis. As such he had jurisdiction over Wellsville. He also reported the news of the day. Thus he was functioning when the sensational Elizabeth Ewing murder occurred in the down-river city. He covered it with accuracy. He was present at the inquest following the finding of the body of the murdered woman under the floor of an out-building behind her one-time residence.

He recalls vividly the excitement attending the event and the reports that were extant as to finding the body in spots elsewhere during the interim that covered her disappearance. He was well acquainted with A. R. Bell and W. N. McCord, the editors of the paper during his connection with it. He also knew J. C. Deldrick, the publisher.

Contemporaneous with many of the professional and business men of the city at the present time, Mr. Laughlin attended school with many of them here. Later he attended the Grand Rapids academy of Austinburg, Ashtabula county, a Congregational school which at the time had a high rating for educational work. He recalls that he was recommended to this school by the then superintendent of the East Liverpool schools and that his first teacher was the late Mrs. George P. Kirk of this city.

MUNICIPAL JUDGE HARRY BROKAW finds time despite his bench duties to indite poetical lines that come to him on various subjects. Some of his recent poems have been read over radio stations. From time to time they have also appeared in journals and magazines throughout the country.

He was full grown when he found out that he could make words rhyme. Indeed, he was assisting his son in a bit of literary effort when he hitched a few words together with some ease. He tried himself out a bit after that. And he made the discovery that he had been neglecting a possessed for all of these years.

He probably will not at any time charge a jury by means of a poem nor render a decision in rhyme. But it is quite certain that many of the occurrences in court will ultimately become the basis of themes which he may reduce to sonnets and other renditions of verse in the years to come.

PROCTOR ANKRIM, East Liverpool cafeteria owner and long a potter in this city, is a distant cousin of the late President James A. Garfield. His mother was an Ellis which reveals him also as of Welsh descent. She was of the same family as the mother of the martyred president. She and the former Mentor resident would be about of the same age.

Born in Wadsworth county near where Ambassador Charles G. Dawes also was born he remembers well the assassination of Garfield. Later he attended the unveiling of the monument erected to him in Cleveland, Ohio.

CHESTER NEWELL-N. CUMBERLAND HIGHWAY AID ASKED

STATE MAY ACT ON RIVER ROAD, SENATOR SAYS

Edwin Wells Confers With Commission Secretary.

A WAITS RULING

Place Is Sought On Program For 1930.

NEWELL—State aid for the improvement of the proposed river road between New Cumberland and Chester, via Arroyo, Congo and Newell, may be available this year, State Senator Edwin Wells, Jr., announced today, following a telephone conversation with George White, Charleston, secretary of the West Virginia road commission. "The state road commission has reached no decision as to its 1930 road improvement program in Hancock county," Wells said. "Members of the road commission are in the east but a decision on this matter is expected soon after their return," he added. Senator Wells called White regarding reports that Hancock county's share of road improvement money in 1930 was to be spent in the improvement of Route No. 2, which passes through Pughtown between New Cumberland and Chester.

A little more than $100,000 will be available for road work in this county next year, Wells said. One of the two proposed roads will get most of this money, White told Wells.

The road via Arroyo has already been surveyed and, while a little longer, it can be built at less expense than the road via Pughtown, Wells said, because of the lack of grading. The Hancock County senator is not seeking to change the course of Route No. 2, but asks for a new road along the river front for the benefit of the river communities.

DECEMBER FIRE CASUALTY LIST SET S RECORD

West Virginia Figures Are High For Final Month.

ARNER REPORTS

Hancock County Fatalities Contrast State Mark.

CHESTER—December fire casualties in West Virginia, including the death of George Engles, 77, Pughtown oil operator, whose burned body was found in front of his residence, showed a decided increase over other months of the year, according to announcement today by State Fire Marshal C. O. Stahlman, Charleston.

Stahlman's report is in contrast to that of Coroner George C. Arner who discloses that only 29 deaths, attributable to other than natural causes, occurred during the year in Hancock county, one of the lowest figures in the last 10 years.

Of the 20 cases, only one was a murder, four were suicide cases, four died from mysterious illnesses, and 11 deaths were accidental.

The report of the state fire marshal shows only one Christmas casualty in the state although three others were listed during the holiday season. Walter M. Miller, Jr., 2, of Lillyrock, Raleigh county, died of scalds received when he fell into a pan of boiling water that was to be used in dressing chickens for the Christmas dinner.

The three Christmas tree mishaps reported happened on days other than the anniversary. Mrs. H. P. Kearns of Martinsburg was burned about her ankles while helping to put out a fire beneath a tree. A short-circuited wire supplying lighting bulbs set fire to flammable material on the floor when the switch was turned on.

Robert Springfield, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Springfield, Wellsburg, was fatally burned while playing with other children around a blazing rubbish heap in the rear yard of his parents' home.

Joseph Robrecht, 80, Wheeling, died of burns received five weeks earlier when a gas explosion wrecked his little home.

Mrs. B. L. Livingston, 38, St. Albans, died of burns suffered in November when her clothing caught fire from burning wax.

John Wisman, garage mechanic, Wheeling, was burned severely on the legs when his blow torch set off fumes from gasoline being used by another mechanic to clean a motor.

Albrecht also says that he was misled when he signed the petition, and that he knows nothing at all about the charges that have been filed against Neill. The affidavit reads:

"I, Frank E. Albrecht, of my own free will, do hereby make the following statement concerning the manner my signature was obtained to a petition that has been filed with the county commissioners asking for the removal of John P. Neill as superintendent of said institution:

"The petition I signed was brought to me by Carl Bowman who was in a machine with J. E. Vanaman. Mr. Neill and I have always been close and good friends. I know absolutely nothing about the truth or falsity of the alleged charges made in the petition against Mr. Neill, as I have always known him to be a straightforward and upright man. Had I known what was in the said petition I would not have signed it. It appears to me now that I was misled all the way through. # NEW OAKLAND, PONTIAC HERE

Bradfield Motor Sales
Co. Shows 1930
Models.

The 1930 model Oakland and Pontiac automobiles are now being shown by the Bradfield Motor Sales, Pennsylvania avenue, East End. The display includes an Oakland four-door sedan and Pontiac four-door and two-door sedans.

The new Oakland is equipped with an 85-horsepower Vee-type eight-cylinder motor. Its wheel base is 117 inches, while bodies are more stylish, longer and somewhat lower.

The major advantages of the Vee-eight include perfect fuel distribution, short crankshaft and rigid crank case, more body room, lower center of gravity, large valves with plenty of water space, best borestroke ratio. Bodies are equipped with adjustable front seats, the VV windshield titled to eliminate glare.

The new series Pontiac Big Six has refined bodies and chassis and improved performance. It is offered in seven models with a wheelbase of 110 inches. The engine is 60-horsepower and completely insulated.

Better riding quality has been attained by making the front springs more flexible. The springs are painted with graphite, covered with grease and fitted with covers. An ignition lock in unit and coil replaces the transmission lock. All instruments are of uniform size. A slanting windshield is used to prevent the glare of rear lights. Appearance of the car has been improved by a half oval belt moulding starting at the radiator, gradually widening to a point just below the windshield post.

DODGE SHOWS 1930 MODELS

New Eight and Six
Are Displayed at Litten's.

The Litten Motor Sales company in East Fifth and Walnut streets today open an exhibit of the new Dodge Brothers' Eight-in-Line and Six which have been added by the manufacturers this year to augment the present improved six and senior lines.

Mono-piece body construction has been adopted for the new eight-cylinder car. Down-draft carburetion and metric thread spark plugs are also used. Clear vision, ventilating windshields set a slant which not only prevents reflections but which also enhance the appearance of the body structure, are features of the mono-piece bodies.

Color combinations include many fascinating new shades. Mohair broadcloth and fine box-grain leather are the upholstery materials used. The entirely new L-head engine with eight cylinders in line, embodies every feature proven practical by the Dodge Brothers engineering organization through many years of research and experimentation.

The new Dodge Brothers' Six is noted for its comfortable riding qualities. The method of mounting the floor boards of the Mono-piece bodies directly by substantial frame of the car gives the new six an inherent advantage on balance and roadability. Well-designed springs of generous length add immeasurably to the comfort of passengers.

In both open and closed models there is plenty of width and head room for passengers and driver. Narrow center posts and side supports permit greater visibility. With seams and body joints welded instead of riveted annoying squeaks and rattles are entirely eliminated in the new car. Hydraulic, internal expanding four-wheel brakes give the driver positive control at all times.

EDEN'S GARDEN IS MODERNIZED BY RAILROAD

Tourists Now Able To Gaze On Scene Of Fall Of Man.

By International News Service. LEBANON, Ind. — Tourists are now able to gaze from the windows of fast passenger trains upon the scene of the fall of Man, according to officials of Ulen and Company, of Lebanon, international engineers, which firm has just completed a railroad construction job for Persia that penetrates the valleys of the Tigris and Euphrates in which the Garden of Eden is supposed to have been located.

The new railroad work was dedicated by the Shah of Persia.

When the entire length of the Persian railroad is constructed, it will pass from the Caspian Sea to the Persian Gulf, reducing a camel caravan journey of six weeks to a 24-hour trip by rail, the Ulen officials said.

The Ulen Company has a unique history. It was founded by Henry Ulen, who left Lebanon a poor boy in his early years. Ulen built up an international engineering business with headquarters in New York and branches in all parts of the world. His company built a huge dam to provide water supply for Athens, Greece; it now is imprisoning the snows of the Andes to irrigate hundreds of square miles in Chile.

A few years ago Ulen developed a longing for his old home town. He transplanted his entire New York personnel and headquarters to this little city, built a beautiful country club residential district for his officials with homes of the most elaborate nature.

Today, persons from all parts of the world come here to discuss engineering projects.

To Olive and Marie

I still can hear your voices
Ringing in my ear,
Wishing each other
"A Happy New Year".

I still can hear your laughter
Happy and gay—
Still can see you at work
And also at play.

I can see your happy smile;
'Twas gladness to the store,
But gladness changed to sadness
Since you are no more.

The Angels high above us
Wanted someone for play,
So they came down to earth
And took you away.

We didn't want to lose you
But what could we do?
'Twas God and His Angels
Who wanted you.

So—when God names His Angels
To Him we will please;
To name you Angel "Olive"
And Angel "Marie".

And until we meet again
In heaven above
Accept our prayers
As a token of love.

REVIVALS WIN LARGE CROWDS

Average Attendance Of 200 At Nightly Services in Boyce M. E. Church Here.

More than 200 persons have attended each meeting of the evangelistic campaign in the Boyce Methodist Episcopal church, Klondyke, the Rev. E. C. Brooks, the pastor, announced today.

The Rev. Mr. Brooks told of the great love of God toward the human race in his sermon on "Love" last night.

"The world is a busy place," he said, "and men, in their strivings for fortune and honor and power, for the principles of life and substitute for them malice and greed. But even the greatest and best of human love cannot compare with that of God."

"He gave His only son so that we sinful mortals might have a chance to redeem ourselves through Him. This sacrifice was God's gift to the human race, proving His love for all mankind."

"We show our love by the giving of gifts and we feel injured and inclined to give punishment if our gifts are not properly honored. God does not force His gifts upon us, but if we do not except them and fall to live by His commandments—we cannot hope to partake in that greater reward which is given to the faithful—eternal life in the heavenly kingdom."

British Champion To Land Tomorrow

Phil Scott "Build-up" For Miami Bout With Sharkey Gets Under Way.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.
NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Promptly with the arrival of the steamship Homeric tomorrow morning, they are going to send the old masonry in on a build-up that will make old Barnum reach up and kick the epitaph off his tombstone. They are going to take something that looks like a golf tee and try to run in into a monument, the inspiration for this ambitious project being furnished by the return of Phil Scott, the grunt, gripe and groan man who will fight Jack Sharkey at Miami.

Scott is going to be the first fighter in history to cash on the public's belief that he can't fight. They think he is sure to be licked; all right, they want to be there to see it done.

This is one of the factors that probably will produce a $100,000 gate when Sharkey and Scott fight this semi-final of the heavyweight championship on the twenty-seventh of next month. The other factors may be listed under one head, known to the trade as "heat." This is the thing that is blown on the corpse, causing it to expand and take life.

The blower-plant at Madison Square Garden is not what it was since Rickard passed on but it won't muffle the fact that Sharkey and Scott are the first American and British heavyweight champions to meet in a ring since the Corbett-Mitchell fight, almost 40 years ago. That always gets them. They would go with a rush to see a British champion who can fight but that's the only thing that will intrigue them more than the supposition that the British champion can't fight, particularly a British champion who is far from popular. In a case like this, the 100 per cent American gorge rises and you give three cheers for the red, white and blue in a very outstanding manner.

The fact that the winner of this fight will go in there for the championship his next time out won't be overlooked, either. They will manage to make this circumstance vivid with impending drama and, at that, I'm not so certain it won't be.

ALL RIGHT, GABBY, OLD BOY, PEG AWAY!

Ray Schalk, the greatest major league catcher of his time, and now a coach for the Chicago Cubs, is encouraging Gabby Hartnett in his efforts to return to form. Gabby, the Cubs' star catcher, works out daily at the L. A. C. gymnasium in Chicago. Schalk says that Gabby's arm is in first class shape.

Edwards In Form For Reed

Will Finish His Workouts Tomorrow Night.

FREDDY EDWARDS, Chester welterweight, slated for an eight-rounder in the Eagles' arena here Thursday night, with Gene Reed, coast welterweight, will finish his workouts tomorrow afternoon.

It will be Edwards' first bout since his scrap with Johnny Ponce, Wheeling welter, in the Washington, Pa., arena, which Edwards won.

Later, the Chester scrapper had an opportunity in Motor Square garden, Pittsburgh, against Hens Roberts, the Dutchman, but lost it when he injured his left arm.

For the time, it was feared that Edwards would be out of competition for some time, but the injury, apparently, has worked itself out, judging from Edwards' training activities.

Yesterday afternoon while he was working at the "Y" gym, a rather rough looking individual observed his bag punching and other "rations." Now Edwards' chief lack has been sparring partners. So when this individual made the crack that Edwards didn't look so hot, Fred offered to take him on. The bout went on with the 12-ounce mittens and Edwards, to say the least, surprised his challenger. The scrapper, wherever he was, took a lot of leather.

Edwards, apparently, is in the pink of condition.

Ted Yarosz, Edwards' stablemate, decisively defeated Johnny Popcig in Wheeling last night, registering a big hit with fans there. He beat Popcig in every round and thoroughly demonstrated his superiority over the Wheeling boy. As a result of his showing, he has been scheduled for another bout in two weeks.

Kidneys Cheated
"The kidneys thus are cheated and their rejoinder is not long in coming, sometimes only a year or two, sometimes longer. The remedy is, of course, is a condition that cannot be altered. Its effect can be considerably lessened, however, if the kidneys can be primed to withstand this unusual strain. As it is, the thing is just plain murder—and I mean that almost literally."

Launch Annual Series

Battles Will be Staged On Potters' Court.

THE local high school gymnasium court will provide the battle site for two of Hancock county's "fighting" rivals—Chester and Newell—who grapple tonight in their first basketball meeting of the present season.

The yearly basketball series provides one of the high spots on the athletic calendars of the Chester and Newell schools and tonight's games, as well as the return events, Feb. 22, which will be staged at Chester, provide no exceptions.

Both teams dropped week-end games, Chester losing at Wells-ville and Newell bowing to Columbiana.

In the latter game, Forward Smith, Newell star, injured a leg but will be in condition to face the Chester lads tonight.

Coach Nate Lora of the Newell ad has arranged a four-game schedule for the night.

Pleasant Heights and Neville grade school teams will start the bit at 6:30 p. m. They will be followed by McKinley and Washington.

Then comes the Chester-Newell girls' game at 8 o'clock with the boys starting a final event at 9. Earl Zook, East Liverpool high school coach, will referee.

COLORED ELKS WIN IN WARREN

East Liverpool Cagers Triumph Over Philo Club, 19 To 18, in Over-Time Battle.

The East Liverpool Colored Elks defeated the Philo club at Warren Saturday night, 19 to 18. The game was close all the way and with the score tied at the end of the regular playing period, an extra five minutes were necessary to decide the issue.

The Elks lined up with Blackburn and Fontaine on the forwards; Lincoln at center, and Banks and Glenn at the guards.

BAPTISTS LOSE TO M. E. FIVE

Winners Pile up 56-21 Score; Presbyterians Down Second Christians on "Y" Court.

The M. E. (A) five overwhelmed the Baptists, 56-21, and the First Presbyterians took over the East End Second Christians in Sunday school league games last night on the M. E. floor.

The M. E.'s, with every man scoring points, and with Brant and Pierson collecting 25 between them, were too good for the Baptists and easily won their game. V. Jordan and Mackey were the scoring stars for the Baptists, the former collecting eight points and the latter chalking up seven points.

In the second game, the Second Presbyterians bowed to the First Presbyterians, 22-11, after playing a great game in the first half, when the score ended 7-6 in favor of the First Presbyterians. Fullerton and Crowe starred for the East Enders and R. Stewart, Salisbury and B. Stewart were the big guns of the down-town offense.

Tonight the Orchard Grove Methodist Episcopal will tangle with the Chester Presbyterians and the Newell Methodist Episcopal five will oppose the Second United Presbyterians on the Chester floor. The games will begin at 7 o'clock, sharp.

Tunney's Mode of Training Is Blamed For His Illness

Too Much Perspiration, Too Little Water Drinking Says Artie McGovern.

By International News Service.
NEW YORK—Eugene Tunney, as he once signed himself in a moment of stress, announced on a certain poignant occasion a year and a half ago that he was through with boxing and all of its works and pumps. This was important, it is true. More important, however, is the fact that boxing apparently wasn't through with him. The sport is a jealous tyrant. It resents anything like the implied slight of voluntary retirement and proceeds to exact its reprisals.

Tunney, the boxer, before the public, was a model of health, whereas Tunney, the private citizen, has just emerged from a hospital where he underwent a delicate operation on his kidneys.

The fault, according to Artie McGovern, the private conditioner of Ruth, Farrell, Sarazen and other athletes, isn't primarily boxing. It is found, it seems, in the mode of training of the boxer himself.

Too much perspiration; too little

The Bishop Murder Case

Philo Vance Story of Mystery and Crime. . . . By S. S. VAN DINE

CHAPTER 17.
BEEDLE came and stood before us with sullen aggressiveness. Vance questioned her along the same lines as he had taken with Pyne. Her answers, for the most part monosyllabic, added nothing to what had already been learned. But at the end of the brief interview Vance asked her if she had happened to look out of the kitchen window that morning before breakfast.
"I looked out once or twice," she answered defiantly. "Why shouldn't I look out?"
"Did you see any one on the archery range or in the rear yard?"
"No one but the professor and Mrs. Drukker."
"No strangers?" Vance strove to give the impression that the fact of Professor Dillard's and Mrs. Drukker's presence in the rear yard that morning was of no importance; but by the slow, deliberate way in which he reached into his pocket for his cigarette-case, I knew the information had interested him keenly.
"No," the woman replied curtly.

Give Baby His Chance To Grow

Mothers Must Build Up Their Strength of Body.

Every baby has a right to be well born. It has a right to a healthy parent. No woman has the privilege of neglecting her body and permitting her blood to be polluted by the absorption of waste products. She should be clean inside as well as out.
No person is clean who suffers from constipation. The waste products of the body must find some way of getting out. If the natural channels are closed, the lungs and kidneys are all overworked. Even then the blood becomes foul. When it does, the stomach gives way, or some other part of the body suffers.
A bad situation deserves plain speaking. Every woman who expects to become a mother should have two or three normal bowel movements a day. So could every one else. Nature never intended that waste matter should remain in the body to be reabsorbed into the blood stream, and Nature punishes everybody who allows that condition to exist.
Most constipation is catarrhal in character. Often it is caused by catarrh. Sometimes it causes catarrh. No amount of violent purges will relieve this catarrhal condition. They only aggravate it. A treatment of the entire system so that Nature herself can overcome the trouble is the right way. That is one of the reasons why so many people say World's Tonic works wonders in cases of constipation. It not only relieves promptly in most cases, but it helps Nature to remove the cause of the trouble.
Expectant mothers can take World's Tonic without danger, and it is intended to help purify the blood, remove catarrhal manifestations and aid the kidneys in throwing off poisons. When these are done, the baby has many more chances of health than it can have when the mother herself is diseased. Give the youngsters their chance by using World's Tonic, which can be obtained at Carnahan's also Branham's at Wellsville or any other first class drug store. (A-2)—Adv.

"What time did you notice the professor and Mrs. Drukker?"
"Eight o'clock maybe."
"Were they talking together?"
"Yes—Anyway," she amended, "they were walking up and down near the arbor."
"Is it customary for them to stroll in the yard before breakfast?"
"Mrs. Drukker often comes out early and walks about the flower beds. And I guess the professor has a right to walk in his own yard any time he wants to."
"I'm not questioning his rights in the matter, Beedle," said Vance mildly. "I was merely wondering if he was in the habit of exercising those rights at such an early hour."
"Well, he was exercising 'em this morning."
Vance dismissed the woman and, rising, went to the front window. To be patiently puzzled, and he stood several minutes looking down the street toward the river.
"Well, well," he murmured. "It's a nice day for communin' with nature. At eight this morning the lark was on the wing no doubt, and—who knows?—maybe there was a snail on the thorn. But—my word!—all wasn't right with the world!"
Markham recognized the signs of Vance's perplexity.
"What do you make of it?" he asked. "I'm inclined to ignore Beedle's information."
"The trouble is, Markham, we can't afford to ignore anything in this case," Vance spoke softly, without turning. "I'll admit, though, that at present Beedle's revelation is meaningless. We've merely learned that two of the actors in our melodrama were up and about this morning shortly after Sprigg was snuffed out. The al-fresco rendezvous between the professor and Mrs. Drukker may, of course, be just one of your beloved coincidences. On the other hand, it may have some bearing on the old gentleman's sentimental attitude toward the lady. . . . I think we'll have to make a few discreet inquiries of him about his antepandral trust, what?"
He leaned suddenly toward the window.
"Ah! Here comes Arnesson. Looks a bit excited."
A few moments later there was the sound of a key in the front door, and Arnesson strode down the hall. When he saw us he came quickly into the drawing-room and, without a word of greeting, burst forth:
"What's this I hear about Sprigg being shot?" His eager eyes darted from one to the other of us. "I suppose you're here to ask me about him. Well, fire away." He threw a bulky brief case on the center table and sat down abruptly on the edge of a straight chair. "There was a detective up at college this morning asking fool questions and acting like a burlesque sleuth in a comic opera. Very mysterious. . . . Murder—horrible murder! What did we know about a certain John E. Sprigg? And so on. . . . Scared a couple of juniors out of an entire semester's mental growth, and sent a harmless young English instructor into incipient nervous collapse. I didn't see the Dogberry myself—was in class at the time. But he had the cheek to ask what women Sprigg went around with. Sprigg and women! That boy didn't have a thought in his head but his work. Brightest man in senior math. Never missed a class. When he didn't answer roll call this morning I knew something serious was the matter. At the lunch hour every one was buzzing about murder. . . . What's the answer?"

"Arnesson!" Vance had been watching him closely. "However, we have another determinant for your formula. Johnny Sprigg was shot this morning with a little gun through the middle of his wig."
Arnesson stared at Vance for some time without moving. Then he threw his head back and gave a sardonic laugh.
"Some more mumbo-jumbo, eh?—like the death of Cock Robin. . . . Read me the rune."
Vance gave him briefly the details of the crime.
"That's all we know at present," he concluded. "Could you, Mr. Arnesson, add any suggestive details?"
"Good Lord, no!" The man appeared genuinely amazed. "Not a thing. Sprigg was one of the keenest students I ever had. Something of a genius, by Gad! Too bad his parents named him John—plenty of other names. It sealed his doom apparently; got him shot through the head by a maniac. Obviously the same merry-andrew who did Robin in with an arrow." He rubbed his hands together—the abstract philosopher in him had become uppermost. "A nice problem. You've told me everything? I'll need every known integer. Maybe I'll hit upon a new mathematical method in the process—like Kepler." He chuckled over the conceit. "Remember Kepler's 'Dollometrie'? It became the foundation of infinitesimal Calculus. He arrived at it by constructing a cask for his wine—a cask with a minimum amount of wood and a maximum cubical content. Maybe the formula I work out to solve these crimes will open up new fields of scientific research. Ha! Robin and Sprigg will then become martyrs."
The man's humor, even taking into consideration his life's passion for abstractions, struck me as particularly distasteful. But Vance seemed not to mind his cold-blooded cynicism.
"There's one item," he said, "that I omitted to mention." Turning to Markham he asked for the piece of paper containing the formula, and handed it to Arnesson. "This was found beneath Sprigg's body."
The other scrutinized it superciliously.
"The Bishop, I see, is again involved. Same paper and typing as the notes. . . . But where did he get that Riemann-Christoffel tensor? Now, if it had been some other tensor—like the G-tensor, for instance—any one interested in practical physics might have hit on it. But this one isn't common; and the statement of it here is arbitrary and unusual. Certain terms omitted. . . . By George! I was talking to Sprigg about this only the other night. He wrote it down, too."
"Pyne mentioned the fact that Sprigg had called here Thursday night," put in Vance.
"Oh, he did, did he? . . . Thursday—that's right. Pardee was here, too. And Drukker. We had a discussion on Gaussian co-ordinates. This tensor came up—Drukker mentioned it first, I think. And Pardee had some mad notion of applying the higher mathematics to chess. . . ."
"Do you play chess, by the by?" asked Vance.
"Used to. But no more. A beautiful game, though—it wasn't for the players. Queer crabs, chess players."
"Did you ever make any study of the Pardee gambit?" (At the time I could not understand the seeming irrelevance of Vance's questions; but I noticed that Markham too was beginning to show signs of impatience.)
"Poor old Pardee!" Arnesson smiled unfeelingly. "Not a bad elementary mathematical problem. Should have been a high-school teacher. Too much money, though. Took to chess. I told him his gambit was unsound. Even showed him how it could be beaten. But he couldn't see it. Then Capablanca, Vidmar and Tartakower came along and knocked it into a cocked hat. Just as I told him they would. Wrecked his life. He's been fussing around with another gambit for years, but can't make it cohere. Reads Weyl, Silberstein, Eddington and Mach in the hope of getting inspiration."

"That's most interesting," Vance extended his match-case to Arnesson, who had been fiddling his pipe as he talked. "Was Pardee well acquainted with Sprigg?"
"Oh, no. Met him here twice—that's all. Pardee knows Drukker well, though. Always asking him about potentials and scalars and vectors. Hopes to hit on something that'll revolutionize chess."
"Was he interested in the Riemann-Christoffel tensor when you discussed it the other night?"
"Can't say that he was. A bit out of his realm. You can't hitch the curvature of space-time to a chess-board."
"What do you make of this formula being found on Sprigg?"
"Don't make anything of it. It had been in Sprigg's handwriting. I'd say it dropped out of his pocket. But who'd go to the trouble of trying to type a mathematical formula?"
"The Bishop apparently."
Arnesson took his pipe from his mouth and grinned.
"Bishop X. We'll have to find him. He's full of whimsies. Perverted sense of values."
"Obviously," Vance spoke languidly. "And, by the by, I almost forgot to ask you: does the Dillard house harbor any revolvers?"
"Oh!" Arnesson chuckled with unrestrained delight. "Sits the wind there? . . . Sorry to disappoint you. No revolvers. No sliding doors. No secret stairways. All open and above-board."
Vance sighed theatrically.
"Sad . . . sad! And I had such a comfortable theory."
Belle Dillard had come silently down the hall, and now stood in the archway. She had evidently pleaded, a little frightened. "Where could it have gone?"

"Ha! Another dark mystery," scoffed Arnesson. "Strange disappearance of a discarded 32."
Seeing the girl's uneasiness Vance changed the subject.
"Perhaps, Miss Dillard, you'd be good enough to take us to Mrs. Drukker. There are one or two matters we want to speak to her about, and I assume, by your presence here, that the ride in the country has been postponed."
A shadow of distress passed over the girl's face.
